Yokibu app free download ymgerman/ShutterstockBored with your apps looking for something new? We've been digging through Google Play, iTunes and other app stores to find the best, saving you time. Here are the apps we think you need to check out this week. The sequel to the popular and award-winning sidescrolling action adventure game is finally here, albeit only on iOS. Badland 2 more or less feels the same as its predecessor, tasking players with floating through the map, avoiding obstacles and surviving until you reach the end. What is different in the second iteration, however, is that instead of just going one straight, you can now move in both directions. It still only has a single player campaign, but there are global challenges, so you can finish against friends through leaderboards. It's a little pricey, costing you $5. iTunes The popular storytelling app has finally come to Android. Storehouse allows you to upload photos, video and text to create a personal story about anything. The nice part is that you can embed your story on blogs or share it with friends and family. You can also browse other user stories. The features are pretty much identical to what you'll find on the iOS version, so there's no difference. Google Play iTunes Bumble is a dating app brought to you by Whitney Wolfe, one of the founders of Tinder, and the main focus is on making women initiator. It works quite like Tinder in that it only connects people who have swiped right at each other's profiles. What is different is that the woman must start the conversation within 24 hours before the connection is gone, and for same-sex connections both individuals can start the conversation. Google Play iTunes Need a file recommendation? Your friends know you best, so why not ask them? That's what Tronko is all about. There's a messaging app built around your friends that recommends and discusses movies with each other. You can start group message threads or have a conversation with one person. The app retrieves its data using the TMDb API, and allows you to rate movies on a scale of 1 to 10. iTunes Google Play Selfie-takers don't have to rely on the front-facing camera anymore. Everyone knows that the rear camera offers a higher-quality photograph, and Elie is an app that lets you point at the rear camera and take selfies without you having to do anything. It recognizes your face and takes multiple photos, but only stores the one you choose. It offers a number of other features as well, such as adding effects while taking a photo, not after. The app will cost you $3. iTunes Editor's recommendations Malarie Gokey/Digital TrendsSeende for a cool new app to download? The choice is massive, so we've dug through Google Play, iTunes and other app stores to find the best, saving you time. Here are the apps we think you need to check out this week. Slide is a pretty little 3D camera app for iOS that breathes some life into your photos. All you have to do is take a photo using the app, while device evenly in a horizontal motion. Once the photo is taken, just tap the subject of the photo and see it turn into a video or GIF, add depth to the image, and really make it pop. The result is easy to share on Instagram, iMessage, Twitter, Facebook and other social media. The app will cost you $1.99, and great for iPhone owners who can't use Apple's own Live Photos feature that's only on iPhone 6S. iTunes It can be hard to keep track of all your photos, and Everalbum wants to help with that. The app provides secure unlimited backups of photos in the cloud, and draws in photos stored on your phone and social media accounts. The free tier stores them at high resolution, but you'll need the premium version of the app to save them at full resolution. Photos are categorized by event, or you can create your own albums, as well as allow you to invite others to upload their own photos. A similar feature was just added to Google Photos. The premium version of Everalbum costs $9.99 per month, with the ability to have your favorite photos printed and sent to your home. Everalbum works in many languages such as English, German, Italian and Arabic. iTunes Windows digital assistant, Cortana, has officially come to Android and iOS. Cortana is built into your Windows Phone and Windows 10 desktop, managing and viewing appointments, tracking packages, giving you your flight information, the weather and more. You need a Microsoft account, and if you're already using a Windows 10 device, Cortana now syncs your data on a smartphone. In the Android version, you can say Hey Cortana, to access the voice assistant from the home screen and in the app as well. If you get a missed call, Cortana will slide it to your Windows 10 PC, and you can reply via SMS to the caller without having to pick up your phone. It's similar to the experience on iOS and Android with Siri and Google Now; but the more competition, the better. iTunes Google Play If you like elegant, simple puzzles to fit the time, loop will be right up your alley. The idea is to close a pattern to create a specific design on the screen, giving the impression that you are completing a circuit. It's easy to play, but very satisfying, because the game doesn't tell you what shape to create, pushing you to play around by pressing the pieces. It's relatively simple and addictive, and the supposedly endless levels should keep you going for a while. iTunes Google Play If you are on your phone a lot, especially for work, you may want to take a look at HappyID. When you get a call, the app shows exactly who you're talking to by showing contact notes and other important information. This may include the company they work for, the title and so on. Correctly, you need to fill in this information when you add the contact to your phone, but it may be worth the effort. The app can display a notification when a call ends and reminds you to make some quick notes Conversation. It syncs with Evernote, which is convenient, and also has Android Wear support. Recommendations from Google Play Editors The best apps that run for free do exactly what they say on the form: They're free and help you run. Nothing better, right? With more people than ever running in lockdown - and the fact that a couple of the most popular and previously free run apps are now charging for some of their services, finding a free option is a great way to stay on track. According to one report, we're not just doing more driving, we're also talking about driving more - in March, 34 million people discussed sidewalk-pounding pastimes on social media and 207k sharing running statistics from fitness apps - both numbers that are more than January and February combined. National lockdown forced us from the gym to the garden, to nature, trying to find a way to stay active and in shape - running, it seems, has taken the cake in terms of accessibility and scalability. Thank you, running! But, you know how to run, how can you actually keep it up? From motivational run-trip plans to route trackers, navigation aids and mile-loggers, we've rounded up the top 8 free running apps to help you hit your next PB - including the one that's had a 92% jump in downloads on 2019. Wowza. Ad - Continue reading under 1 Sofa to 5K Everyone from your dentist to your aunt seems to have flirted with the idea of making Couch 5k - the running schedule that gets novice runners and never-run-before-runners able to run a full 5k. And according to the BBC, more than 858,000 downloaded the app (supported by the NHS) between March and June. That's a whopping 92% increase on the year before! This app features five different trainers to motivate you on your journey - as well as tell you when to run and when to go - including comedian Sarah Millican, radio presenter Jo Whitley and Olympian Michael Johnson. Woah. The program can be completed in guided 9 weeks or longer if you wish, and this app helps you continue when you stop seems like the easiest option. There's a half-time clock for when you're halfway, so you know how to turn and complete the loop, a before and after assessment system to keep track of your motivation, as well as an easy to follow countdown timer, so you always know how long is left of each race. IOS/ANDROID 2 Map My Run Map My Run, Under Armour's driving app, has a myriad of features to make your running experience smoother than ever. It connects to multiple portable devices — including Apple Health, Apple Watch, Garmin, Fitbit, Jawbone, and more — which means you can go out with just your fitness tracker, safe in the knowledge that your stats are still being logged. The app also offers real-time audio coaching on GPS-tracked races, with changing voice for statistics such as pace, distance and altitude. IOS/ANDROID 3 Adidas Runtastic You can wear Adidas sneakers, but have you ever tried its running app? Well, if you don't have that lace up There are so many cool features you have to take advantage of from distance, time, speed, height and calorie tracking to audio feedback, targeted challenges and customizable goals. Oh, and they'll even go a step further, tracking how many miles you've run in your running shoes and telling you when it's a good time to start thinking about investing in a new pair. They've literally thought about everything. Cheers, Adidas. IOS/ANDROID 4 Runkeeper Runkeeper by ASICS does a lot. It can track your races, set goals to run ahead and faster, listen to audio statistics that tell you pace, distance and time, follow a personal plan that keeps you better and joins virtual challenges in the app. The best? The app syncs with portable devices, so you can leave your phone at home and go out with just the Apple Watch and still get your stats tracked. IOS/ANDROID 5 Nike Run Club Nike Run Club describes this program as your perfect running partner, and TBH, we must agree with them. Track and save runs in its easy-to-navigate super-aesthetic app, make good use of GPS to keep you on track, listen to audio coaching and set weekly, monthly or custom distance challenges as well as tailored coaching plans to ensure you keep smashing your goals. Although the trophies and badges you collect for new achievements can be virtual, they still mean the world to us. Get out there! iOS/ANDROID 6 Running Distance Tracker + Slated as the most accurate running app available Running Distance Tracker+ tracks pace, calories, heart rate, and of course distance. Use your GPS to find new running routes, take a look at your time and speed splits, as well as heart rate and effort zones, and listen for the customizable voice feedback to tell you how you're going. There are paid options in the app, but the basics - and they're really the only ones you need - are free. That's all that matters. iOS/ANDROID 7 Endomondo If you want to sync with other apps, set goals to crush, take challenges and socialize with your other running friends, Endomondo may be the app for you. With all the classics: run tracking, audio coaching, training summaries, personal record alerts you can also add fun extras that document a particularly good (or tough) run with a photo, browse your friends' workouts and comment to keep them going! It's a premium option, but everything we've mentioned above is completely, completely free. Winner. iOS/ANDROID 8 Run Coach Run Coach does as it says on the tin: It trains you through and between your races to make you a better runner. Fine-tune your program as your fitness improves, customize your schedule if you miss a run and need to recalibrate the program, access new steps and goals as your abilities increase, sync with your favorite, and make good use of the handheld trainers if you have questions about nutrition or injury. iOS / ANDROID content is created and maintained by third party, and imported into this page to help users provide their email addresses.
